Historic Overview:

Joseph H. Esterling, the first owner of this house was a carpenter and contractor of Prussian heritage. Members of the Esterling family resided in the home until 1954. Little alteration to the original floor plan and architectural features has been made.

Westward expansion of Corktown corresponded with the 1863 street railroad installation on nearby Michigan Avenue. The Esterling House, built in 1864 is a wonderful example of Vernacular housing with fine Italianate architectural detailing.
